

TSAWOUT FIRST NATION

RAISING THE BIGHOUSE

BECOME A PART OF OUR STORY

After a devastating fire in 2009 that destroyed the cultural and spiritual home of the Tsawout community, construction is underway to rebuild this important piece of the community.

Benefiting children, youth and elders alike, the longhouse provides a place for community to gather and practice cultural traditions.

Supporting this project means you can be a part of a unique cultural and social preservation and revitalization project. This is an important step forward for the wellbeing of the community, and an exciting opportunity for the surrounding community to come together and support this historic event.

We appreciate all donors and community partners. Your support is essential and appreciated. HÍSWKE. (Thank you!)

This building project engages local community members in training and employment opportunities and capacity building. This results in long term benefits by embedding construction knowledge within the community. The community is creating a facility that is designed and constructed to be reflective of their distinct culture. The building will be reflective and responsive to the people that will use it: not just in the present, but for many generations to come.
